Brazilian Folklore

Folklore is an English word. It means "popular wisdom": folk = people (povo) + lore = wisdom (sabedoria). August is the month of folklore. We celebrate the rites, traditions, popular wisdom, dances, and festivities in Brazil in August. The date is celebrated on August 22nd.

Let's meet some creatures of Brazilian folklore.

Curupira ► Curupira is a creature with bright red hair. His feet are turned backwards(2). He lives in the forests of Brazil and protects the nature.

O Boto Rosa ► A pink dolphin comes out of the Amazon rivers at night during Festas Juninas (June Festivities). The dolphin becomes a handsome man dressed in white clothes. He wears a white hat to cover his face and big nose. He is a charming man. He goes to parties and looks for beautiful young women. The next morning, he turns into a pink dolphin again.
